Mile Stones in the Career of William Jennings Bryan

William Jennings Bryan was born at Salem, Ill., March 19, 1856. After graduating from the Union College of Law at Jacksonville, Ill., in 1881, he was admitted to practice law in Illinois in 1882. October 1, 1881, he married Mary Elizabeth Baird of Peery, Ill. He practiced law at Jacksonville until 1887 and then removed to Lincoln, Neb. He was a member of the Fifty-second and Fifty-third congress, from 1891 to 1895 from the First Nebraska district. He was nominated by the Democratic convention in Nebraska for United States senator in 1894 but was defeated by John M. Thurston, newspaper man of Omaha. He wrote the famous "Silver plank" in the platform of the democratic convention in Chicago in 1896 and made the notable speech advocating it, which by turn won for him the nomination for candidate for president in one of the most stirring scenes that ever attended a political meeting of any kind. He was defeated by William McKinley for the presidency. He was again nominated for president in 1900 and again defeated by William McKinley, more decisively than before. He then established his newspaper, The Commoner, at Lincoln, Neb., and took a tour around the world. For the third time he was nominated for president, at Denver in 1908, and again defeated, this time by William Howard Taft. He was appointed secretary of state by President Woodrow Wilson and took office March 4, 1913. He is the author of several books, notably, "Under Other Flags" and "The Old World and Its Ways." His permanent home is in Lincoln, Nebraska.

She's Glad of It.
Editor Leader: Hon. W. J. Bryan

has resigned which to me brought great joy, for he had always been my guiding star in politics, seen from a woman's point of view. Very respectfully.—Rachel A. Rees.

Mr. Rees Card.

Editor Leader: The people are well pleased to hear they will not have to ride in the dirty old street cars much longer. O no, they are not going to paint them or put on round wheels. They think they are good enough for Guthrie. But we are able and willing to pay for good service and will have it soon. The jitneys will not jolt your life out. One branch of the service will meet all passenger trains at the union station and take passengers to any part of the city. That alone will be a great accommodation for the people. The garage will be built on the vacant lots south of the lone hotel; will be two stories high. The cars will enter the first story from the north on the level and will enter the second story from Harrison avenue on the level also. Will need no elevator; the ground is in that shape. Guthrie is not coming back. She has already come back and is going on ahead. Watch her grow.—R. Reed.

Activities of Women.

Miss Olga Dyrfer, the 17 year old Philadelphia girl who is a champion swimmer in her class, will compete in the long distance swimming races to be held at the Panama exposition.

Miss Irene Chancellor recently broke the women's collegiate broad jump record when she cleared fifteen feet and one inch during a dual track meet between Howard Payne college of Mexico, Mo., and Stephens college of Columbia, Mo.

For the first time in history a body of working women from different parts of the country, representing various industries, is to meet in New York city during the present month to deliberate upon legislation and best methods of organization.

Many women have taken the place of men in the offices of a big express company in New York City, and the company states that with the help of adding machines work in one department that formerly required 12 men is now done by nine women.

TINY POSTOFFICE IN GUAM IN A HUGE GRAFT

POSTAL INSPECTOR FINDS $40,000 SHORTAGE IN $100 POSTOFFICE

Washington, June 10.—As a result of a globe encircling trip by Inspector E. P. Smith to audit the accounts of the $100 postoffice on the island of Guam, Pedro N. Duarte, postmaster and chief justice of the court of appeals of Guaz, is serving a ten year sentence in Bilibid, the ancient Spanish prison at Manila.

Smith discovered a shortage of between $39,999 and $40,000 embezzled by Duarte during the half dozen years he had charge of the postoffice.

Shortage is a Surprise.

When Smith set out for Guam not then he nor the postoffice officials knew there was anything wrong with the island postoffice. They were suspicious, however, that the $100 received annually from Postmaster Duarte did not represent the total revenue of the office.

Smith called the result of his investigation and asked for instructions. He was ordered to take charge of the postoffice and prosecute Duarte. The first part of the instructions was easy to follow, but under the archaic Spanish laws for a time it looked as if Duarte might escape him. Smith speaks Spanish, and by diligent search he unearthed a statute that enabled him to charge Duarte with theft.

Jury Finds Verdict Quickly.

It did not take a Guam jury long to find Duarte guilty, while the trial judge opined that ten years in Bilibid would give the erring official ample time to repent.

For a time it looked as if Smith might have to stay on the island to look after the postal business. Ultimately, however, he induced the clerk to the naval postmaster, a young American, to accept the place.

BRYAN PLANS FOR LECTURE TOUR ON PEACE

other sensation at the Baltimore convention in 1912 by his fight on the Taft many leaders in the New York delegation. He switched his support to Mr. Wilson at a critical moment, a circumstance to which has been ascribed Mr. Wilson's nomination as well as the birth of a personal friendship with Champ Clark.

During the national campaign of 1912 Mr. Bryan made many speeches for Mr. Wilson, principally in the Far West. Later Col. E. M. House, a mutual personal friend, brought them together on the subject of the secretaryship of state, a place which Mr. Wilson felt that he owed to Mr. Bryan because of the latter's position in the Democratic party.

"Grape Juice" First. While holding the portfolio of secretary of state, Mr. Bryan has continued in the public eye not alone through his official acts, but his devotion to two things—lecturing and politics. One of the first sensations of his official career was his announcement that grape juice would be substituted for alcoholic beverages whenever he entertained members of the diplomatic corps.

Mr. Bryan's editorials in his newspaper, The Commoner, on prohibition and woman suffrage, the signing of thousands of pledges in temperance meetings where he spoke, and his advocacy of these issues irrespective of the attitude of President Wilson, has furnished political gossip over his future plans and ambitions.

Members of the cabinet who know Mr. Bryan most intimately declare, however, he has always been the least ambitious man at the cabinet table and unwavering in his political support of the president. He used his influence in congress to keep the ranks of the administration Democrats solid for the tariff and currency bills.

Peace Pledge Signed.

The secretary handled personally the negotiation of nearly thirty peace treaties between the United States and foreign nations by which all disputes were to be submitted to an impartial investigating commission for a year before hostilities could begin. The delicate negotiations in the Japanese-Chinese situation recently were directly in the hands of Mr. Bryan, who consulted with the president constantly.

Mr. Bryan's now famous remark to Ambassador Chinda, in a critical moment in the relations between the United States and Japan: "There is nothing final between friends"—was but one of his numerous expressions in the advocacy of lasting peace.

The numerous questions involved in the dealings of the United States with the factional leaders in Mexico also absorbed his attention at all hours of the day and night.

Back to Platform.

Mr. Bryan's home life in the capital has won the admiration of officials and diplomats. He and Mrs. Bryan have entertained lavishly, giving a series of luncheons, dinners and garden parties during the last two years. When Mr. and Mrs. Bryan came here from Lincoln they took the house in which Gen. John A. Logan formerly lived.

Secretary Bryan plans to return to his lectures and editorials.

"An Old Man at 40"

How often you hear that remark! How many such men there are! And how needless it is!

Wrong food is the big cause

When one feels old at forty the first thing is to correct improper diet. The main fault with the dietary is often a lack of the vital mineral salts in food. Without these mineral elements old age steals on rapidly.

To meet this very condition a food was devised which supplies these mineral elements such as phosphorus, iron, sulphur, etc.

That food is

Grape-Nuts

Made of whole wheat and barley, this delicious food retains all the nutriment of these grains, together with the priceless mineral elements—notably lacking in white flour foods—which the system must have to build and maintain vigor and elasticity of body, brain and muscle.

One can avoid this "old-age-at-40" business by proper eating and living.
